

Appointment of New Investment Partner

Edinburgh Partners' policy is to ensure there is sufficient resource to meet the expectations of our clients, as well as orderly growth in new business. Over the past few months, we have undertaken an extensive search to identify candidates who share our long-term philosophy of investing and will best fit with the team. We are now able to announce a further recruitment as a result of this search. Following the announcement earlier last month of two new investment partners; Graham Wood and Craig Armour, we are delighted to announce a further senior addition to our investment team.

Peter Reid will be joining Edinburgh Partners as an Investment Partner. Peter was formerly CIO and Director of Ignis Asset Management. Peter is well known to the team and with over 24 years in the financial services industry he brings a wealth of investment experience to the team. In keeping with our focus on detailed long-term company analysis, he will be engaged in global sector research in addition to managing the assets of a number of our institutional clients.

Commenting on the appointment, Dr Sandy Nairn, CEO and Investment Partner said,

“We are delighted to be able to make this announcement and are confident that Peter will make a significant and valuable contribution to the research work carried out by our highly experienced analytical team. This latest recruitment further underpins our ability to continue to deliver superior long-term returns for our clients”.

Peter Reid added,

“My move refocuses my career on what I enjoy most, which is to perform long-term company analysis to seek out undervalued companies. Edinburgh Partners has an enviably strong team and has created a great environment in which to apply my trade”.
